So you think you can go straight?

Whether it's because we were born on this whirling planet or the way things have turned out, to 'go straight' is a commendable achievement.

Take the case of John Citizen. To commemorate some turning point in his life, he turns to and organises a turnout at which most of his friends turn up. He is then expected to turn it on whilst, to keep the evening rolling, some of his guests put on a turn or two. Then comes the final round of refreshments, the evening winds up and it's time to turn in. Maybe this explains the giddiness of which some complain next morning.

We register certain emotions by turning an appropriate colour -- red, white, green, etc.

Even the pet pooch describes several circles before lying down, perhaps because one good turn deserves another.

Somebody says he intends to do such and such and then turns round and does just the opposite.

During the last depression our morale was constantly boosted by the promise of prosperity 'just around the corner' and things would take a turn for the better.

Our main responsibilities as citizens commence when we turn twenty-one.

How many of us have neglected certain chores on the grounds that it was not our turn.

A handyman is described as one who can turn his hand to anything. (Better fix that obstinate door latch or that dripping tap before the family turns on you.)

It is said of recalcitrant children that they are often putting on a turn and they are punished if they don't turn it up.

Honest people who find valuable lost property usually turn it in at the nearest Police Station.

The theme of the editorial by Jim Dingwall was that of turning over a new leaf.

Go straight, eh! Is your face straight at this moment?

We'll all turn our thoughts and actions into many channels before we turn up our toes.

Maybe I have screwy ideas because I was born around the turn of the century.

Now my wife is calling -- the dinner is done to a turn and would I do her a good turn by turning up on time as it is my turn to carve the joint.

Wouldn't it rotate you?

NEWS: Will the Church folk please note that our Services are to be held at 7.30 instead of at 7 pm.

Many things are a test to our loyalty. Sometimes it is fatigue that causes us to say, "I am too tired to go to Church tonight." At other times it is poor organisation, which backgrounds the excuse
"I haven't got time to go to Church tonight." Just lately we can fall back on an excellent reason and claim, "It's too hot to go to Church tonight."

Excuses are dangerous because they prevent us so often from seeing the real reason. It is interesting to note that in the Gospel record, even when in danger of His life, Jesus never offered an excuse. He always spoke the truth.

THOUGHT FOR THIS ISSUE: "There is Salvation in no one else, for there is no other name under heaven given among men by which we must be saved." ACTS: 4-12.

PRAISE.

It is very rare, and when just,
a noble thing to praise; few people
praise enough; all ought to praise wherever they see anything that can be praised. Once in a century a man may be ruined or for a time made insufferable by praise, but surely once a minute something dies for want of it. I once heard someone say, "Praise is the occupation of Heaven."

A start will probably be made in the new financial year for the preliminary work of building a bridge on the site of the present Jervois Bridge at Adelaide, S.A.

This was recently announced by the S.A. Minister for Roads, Mr. Jude. The bridge to replace the existing 78-year-old structure will have four traffic lanes and will cost about £300,000.
